A great crowd of politicians and business men went to the Church of the Saviour on Park Street, Boston, last night, the last mark of respect to the memory of Ripley Ropes. A short service was first held at the hotel, 400 members of the family being present. The Rev. A. P. Putnam, the former pastor of Mr. Ropes' church, read lessons, and the Reverend Mr. Crafty, of St. Mark's Church, gave the closing address. The members of the family were present. The Rev. A. P. Putnam, the former pastor of Mr. Ropes' church, read lessons, and the Reverend Mr. Crafty, of St. Mark's Church, gave the closing address. The members of the family were present.

Published: May 22, 1890
Copyright © The New York Times